Law Firm and High School Face Off on Court for Local Charity

(Cleveland, Ohio) - March 27, 2007 - On Friday March 30, attorneys from law firm Calfee, Halter & Griswold LLP will be taking some high school students to court - the basketball court, that is.

In efforts to raise money for Harvest for Hunger, St. Martin de Porres High School's student team will play Calfee lawyers and staff. The event is open to the public, and the admission price is $1 or one non-perishable food item to benefit the Cleveland Food Bank. As an added incentive, all those in attendance will have a chance to win tickets to see the Lake County Captains during the upcoming baseball season.

"We are proud to partner with Saint Martin de Porres High School in the Corporate Work Study Program and this is another way that we can partner in support of our community by raising money for Harvest for Hunger," explains Ron Stupka, Manager of Office Services at Calfee, who also added that the lawyers at Calfee hope to make this an annual event.

The Corporate Work Study Program at Saint Martin de Porres High School helps pay for 70% of the cost of education for students to receive a private, Catholic, college-preparatory education in the city of Cleveland. Calfee Halter and Griswold has supported the program and the school from its first year in 2003 and employs 4 students who work on a job team there; Christian Bell, Charlene Marshall, Santino Montanez, and Phillip Jewell, which helps provide them a real life work experience and a quality education.
